Dear Lorraine,

Am so glad you still had a copy of LaVerne Evergreen Cemetery ... left. It gave some data new to me on Barnhisers, and some bits also on Grossnickles. Now I plan to donate it to Denver Public Lib's Genealogy Division, as I try to avoid building up a personal genealogical lib other than a few standard reference things. Your book was beautifully done--it helps to have graves in location order, so one can see who else is buried in the near vicinity. And the index is most helpful in its full info offered for every name. If you have a lot of copies left, might I suggest that you send flyers to libraries all over the place? I think a lot of them would buy, for I don't think another such collection of data for LaVerne has been published.

No, I don't have any copies left of my Grossnickle book. I have only made copies to sell of three of my family histories, and for all three I printed only enough to fill pre-publication orders. Two other family books in 1990 & 1994 I donated a printer's copy to the family society, for them to make & sell copies as a source of revenue for the society. For all the other histories (I did 10 or 12 in all) I just printed up 15 or 20 copies, enough to donate to genealogy libs across the country. Many libs are not allowed to spend scarce funds on family histories, as not pertaining to enough people. Instead, they are required to spend on research materials such as all kinds of vital records, area histories, area biographical works, tax lists, etc. That is why I am sure many libs would be interested in your cemetery record book--be sure to indicate on the flyer that LaVerne is in California, and give the county also, as their purchase lists often go by area. (I was a cataloger-librarian for 18 yrs. for Denver Pub. Lib.)

Your Frantz book, or rather set, sounds like a monumental work. Since our lib here is not allowed to spend public funds for family histories, several of us in the state genealogical society make a practice of ourselves donating and encouraging others to donate any family histories that we buy or write, and our lib here has the second-best genealogy collection between the Mississippi & California--the best is of course the LDS Lib at St. Lake.

As you mentioned, I looked up in one book I did, whether any Frantz names occurred, and the few pages enclosed are from my Boyer history, though I imagine you already have that particular info. In my very early family histories, I did carry out the women's lines, but for some years now I have carried the daughter lines out only to one full generation. I prefer to keep a particular book mostly on that particular family, and I figure that anyone who gets back far enough to know he has a Boyer or a Younker or whatever, in his ancestry, will be able to find that ancestor in my book. Further research is then up to him; since family histories are not usually considered proof of ancestry, the researcher will in any case need to work up his proof on his own. Do I sound too hard-nosed? I don't mean to be but have just found, for myself, that I can't handle all the married-in lines if I hope to do a good job on the book's main family. I suppose I could do the female lines, too, if I worked with a whole group. Actually, I did work with a sort of committee on one early book, and it was pretty frustrating, as no one could agree on organization of lines or anything else.

I am sorry you had no answer from your previous letter to me. I try to be very conscientious in answering all mail, but as you say, the letter may not have arrived here or my answer may have gotten lost. I do remember that a few years back we had a housesitter when we were gone some time out of the country--that time a large bunch of our mail was lost behind some furniture but we thought we had finally located it all.

You are right on the button about the rise in printing costs! Am not sure whether I will be doing any more family histories or not. Actually, I've done most of those I wanted to--I tried to develop into books those of our lines for which some ancestor had done some significant work but never printed it or even passed out copies. One was a 10-page chart done by Max's uncle in 1932 or so, and there were only three copies known, all unavailable to the public. Another was a three-page closely-written chart done by Max's dad at a Barnhisser reunion in the 1930's, and Max had the only copy. There were some others like that, which I was able to research and develop into books of 115 to 710 pages. I felt so fortunate to have inherited those scraps.

I would be very interested to know which Younker line you have. Enclosed are two pages of ancestor charts showing my line. If you can send me the earliest generation in this country of your Younker line, maybe I can search more. My line had very few males, so at one time nearly died out. But there is a larger Younker line in Ohio and later Iowa, that owns a well-known department store in Iowa, I think it is. One Younker correspondent wrote that family may be Jewish. There is also a small batch of records about another Younker line in Maryland & Ohio. So I can try.

I know what you mean about the Brethren family having so many interrelationships. I found that my husband ^{and} ~~I~~ are related in Mishler, Studebaker, Stauffer, and one other which I can't remember right now. Oh, the other one is Ullery.

I am glad we got in touch, and if you want to pursue the Younkers, I will look forward to hearing again.

Sincerely,

Carrie Boyer
