Christian Frantz was born in Pennsylvania, and with others of his father's family he moved to Botetourt County, Virginia, about 1784. Shortly thereafter he married Mary Gerst, and in 1814 he and his faithful wife and nine children moved to Clark Co., Ohio, settling three miles west of what is now Springfield. He was chosen as second Bishop of the Donnel's Creek Church. He is said to have been small of stature, of a very pleasant and genial disposition, and much respected by all. His advice and counsel were sought by all. He was known as "Elder Christly." He spoke German only. He and doubtless Mary were buried in Myer's Cemetery, nearby, and a stone boulder marks his grave, according to his request.

Here is a little interesting Garst-Frantz history:

Michael Frantz II came to America when he was two years old, with his father, Michael Frantz I. That was in 1727, and they came on the ship "Molly."

Three days earlier, Ulric Zug and wife, Barbara Bachman Zug, had landed from the ship "James Goodwill." Both families settled in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, and all were associated in the "Dunkard" Church.

Later Michael Frantz II married Magdalena Zug. They had eight sons and one daughter. Four of the sons married four of the daughters of John Nicholas Gerst, I, and the daughter also married a Gerst, said to be George Gerst. Can't place him.

Mary Gerst married Christian Frantz

Anna Gerst married Daniel Frantz

Marie Elizabeth Gerst married David Frantz

Catherine Gerst married Peter Frantz

Note: A George Gorst, single, paid taxes in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, in the years 1786, 1787, and 1788, but not in 1789. Could he have married the Frantz girl and migrated to Virginia, along with many others who went?

The family Bible of Frederick Garst, II, was handed down through the family of his son, David, to Hiram, to Herman S. Garst, who lives at Okmulgee, Okla., and it has been purchased from Herman S. Garst by William T. Garst of Kansas City, Mo.

This Bible is 10x13x3 inches, is bound with wooden, leather-covered backs, and is printed entirely in German. Contains the old and new testaments, and the 14 apocryphal books.

The title page states that the book is according to the German translation of "Dr. Martin Luthers," that it is the first edition "Die erste Unslage," and the date, 1813. There follows a letter to the publisher's "German Brethren," and at the bottom is his name, Friedrich Goeb, and the place and date: Somerset, Penn., June 26, 1813.

Anna Garst, daughter of Frederick and Magdalena (Rauch) Garst, came with her husband and older children, to Highland County, Ohio, stopping on White Oak Creek, where there was a small settlement. They traded their wagon and one horse for fifty acres of land, and built a house and a round-log barn on it. At one time, there seemed to be imminent trouble with the Indians in Clark County, some sixty miles from White Oak, and our Gordon family started the 375-mile trip back to Virginia, settling on Mason's Creek, near Salem. On October 7, 1816, they again started for Ohio--such was the pioneer spirit! They came to the home of an aunt and uncle of Anna, Mary (Garst) and Christian Frantz, and later bought a farm on which they lived the rest of their lives. The back part of the farm joined the Frantz farm, located four miles from Springfield, Ohio.

Both Richard and Anna were buried near the orchard on this farm as was thd daughter, Eliza, who had died 10 years earlier. They were buried in hand-made walnut caskets, hewn from a solid walnut log. After Anna and Richard had been buried some 60 years (Eliza 70 years) they were moved to Bethel Twp. Cemetery, where they have a suitable monument. The solid walnut caskets were still in a good state of preservation.

Anna had been a member of the Church of the Brethren for 47 years before her death, and Richard transferred from the Episcopalian to the Brethren Church. Neither had much education in school, she being married at fifteen, but they lived their busy lives in such a way that their children were impressed with the great importance of industry, honesty, and morality, summed up in Christianity.

Note: Fuller records are in possession of Anna's great, great granddaughter, Mrs. Rollin A. Stukeley (Mary Ruth Powell) of 321 N. Walnut St., Van Wert, Ohio.

The famous Henry Clay spent the night after the birth of Henry Clay Garst at the home of Abraham Garst I - hence the name.

The following is part of a letter written in 1892 by Henry Clay Garst (3136), to his niece, Katherine Sample Garst, in answer to a letter she had written to his daughter, Barbara, asking for some facts concerning the family history:

"Now, my dear niece, the reason that I have undertaken this laborious but pleasurable task, (laborious because I am in my 75th year), is that by a vote of the family I was unanimously assigned that duty, as probably more competent to give you a chronological history of our ancestors than any of the others. What little I know of our ancestors, for it will not be a four-volume affair, I assure you, I learned from my father and mother when I was quite a boy, for they have been, as you know, dead these many years.

The story on my mother's side partakes a little of the romantic.

Her father was Christopher Ribble, and he seems to have had a liberal education, as he chose medicine as a profession. After qualifying himself by reading in the office of a local physician, he attended medical lectures in the city of Amsterdam in Holland. During his first course of lectures, he made the acquaintance of a young lady of that city by the name of Barbara Magdalena Brinkerhoff. During his second course of lectures, his acquaintance with this young lady ripened into something more than mere friendship. After he graduated, they concluded they would like to get married, but now their troubles began. The young lady's father (a stern old Dutchman I suppose he was, and tradition says a wholesale druggist and quite wealthy) would not give his consent. But as the saying goes, 'True love is never balked by bolts and bars,' and their next recourse was to accomplish the same thing on another line. When he had asked for her hand in marriage, the father was furious to think that a penniless young doctor should aspire to the hand of his daughter, and when the daughter declared she would marry him in spite of her father's refusal, he forbade the young man the house, and locked the young woman in her room. But a kindly maid-servant carried notes. Plans were made and the young couple got away.

As America was attracting a great deal of attention at that time in Europe, and as a Dutch schooner was lying in port ready to sail, they decided to take passage for the new world. They did so and were married on board the vessel by the vessel's Chaplain. They had a long and tiresome passage lasting nearly six months (all sail then and no steam), finally landing at Philadelphia on the day on which the battle of Brandywine was fought, September 11, 1777, the Revolutionary War being already well commenced.

Poor and nearly worn out with their long and tedious passage, they still had the same courage that had impelled them to come over. They cast their lot with the patriots, renounced their allegiance to all foreign potentates, and became new-born American citizens. Grandfather immediately took service in the American Army as a physician and surgeon, and grandmother found refuge among the Dutch settlers of Lancaster, Pennsylvania. Several years later letters were exchanged with her father, and he relented so far as to send her her dowery - furniture, linen, silver, etc., but the ship went down and all was lost.

After the close of the war, they were reunited and settled in or near Hagarstown, Maryland, where my mother Katherine was born. She was the firstborn of the family. After living there several years and having other children, they moved to Virginia and settled near Blacksburg in Montgomery County. There grandfather bought a large tract of land, and practiced medicine for many years, and there is where my father and mother (Abraham Garst I and Katherine Ribble) were married.

Then my father and mother lived for many years (43 years I think he told me) on a farm in Botetourt Co., Virginia, about 40 miles from where Grandfather Ribble live. They raised a family of nine children, seven boys and two girls. They sold their farm in 1835 and moved to the West. They stopped in Clark Co., the first year, and then moved to St. Joseph Co., Indiana, and settled at South Bend. My father died in the fall of 1838, and my mother died in the spring of 1841. They lie side by side in a little graveyard (as it was called at that time) about two miles east of South Bend and known then as Bowman's graveyard.

My father, Abraham Garst, Sr., was born March 4, 1770, in Dauphin County, Pennsylvania. He was five years old when the Revolutionary War began and thirteen when it ended. He had many vivid recollections of that memorable struggle. Three of his brothers, Nicholas and Frederick and Jacob, being older members of the family, were in the Army of the Revolution during the whole eight years of the war. Four sisters of my father married four brothers by the name of Frantz.

Dear Niece, it is a pretty laborious job for an old man to write letters. I write but few these days, but I am pretty good on the talk yet, and sometime when you come to visit me, I will tell you some things I have failed to write about. Etc."

"A few years after receiving this letter from my uncle, I paid him a visit. I found my uncle a most delightful old man, so kind, a typical Virginian in hospitality, and a talker who never had to hesitate for a word.

Katherine Ribble Gaest was the oldest child in the family, and Henry Ribble was the youngest. It was with Henry in Virginia that his nephews, Elias, Michael, and George Garst read medicine. Katherine Ribble Garst had nine children - seven sons, John, Elias, George W., Joel, Daniel, Michael, and Henry Clay; two daughters, Mary and Hannah."
