he considered works of Satan and he would not even allow them to read fiction. Soon Marion married Abigail Brown and set up a home of his own. Abigail was a plain girl but good as gold and "Abbie" was always the only one for Marion as long as he lived. Michael's fireside missed the cheerful presence of the eldest son, for he was always pleasant and never blue or disagreeable.

About the time that Adaline was 11 or 12 years old, an interdenomination Sunday School was held at the Rose Hill shhoolhouse. A Mr. Stacy had moved out from New Albany with his family. There were two nice well-mannered boys, Harry and Jasper, and a little girl, Hattie. Mr. Stacy made an excellent superintendent and big crowds came. In summer, seats were placed outside in a grove and they had picnics and programs. One day little Hattie was placed on a table by her father and recited, "Little drops of water little grains of sand". Adaline's little sister Susie and a playmate, Amelia Scott, one time wore white dresses and carried banners in a parade. Clabe Sigler, Harve's son, was active in the programs.

Everybody was sorry when the Stacys decided to move to Texas. They had a sale to which Betsy and the younger children went. An auction was one of the interesting social gatherings of the day. Sorrier still it was when news came back that little Hattie had died on the road to Texas and been buried along the way. John Patton became the new superintendent but he was never as successful.

The church at Pleasant Ridge which had been a Christian Church was almost broken up by Mormons and Mt. Eton was entirely wrecked. The Mormon preachers, Blair and Banty, came from Utah and gained many converts in that section. They tried to practice healing by prayer. Some families let their people die rather than call a doctor, while others called only when it was too late. John Bywater, an old teacher, and Johnny, Jim and "Blackhawk" Scott, all Christian ministers, became Mormons. Jim Scott's daughters talked in unknown tongues. Debates were held and some converts went directly to Utah. John Bywater argued with Betsy one day but she refused to be convinced. "Have it your way" "Have it your way," he said. "The devil will get you at last."

Into this quiet community near 1870 there came the stirring bustle of a new industry. There was a big deposit of fine hard quartz sand near the joining place of the four counties and a man by the name of J.B. Ford started the experiment of making plate glass at New Albany, having sand hauled from this section. Adaline heard one of the Goss men say, "There are going to be great works here and still greater ones will follow." He thought there were rich deposits, possibly of oil, under the sand. Ford operated his Star Glass Works without much success but later it was to become a real business under the capable management of a wealthy man. Washington C. DePauw.

Tragedy had come into the Brock home before but never as it did in April of 1871. Betsy Stover Brock, beloved mother, died of pneumonia following the birth of another baby that did not live. It was a sudden thing and Adaline could not believe it was true. No mother? Why, Mother was everything! Al was in Salem at school and had to be called home, for his mother's funeral. Only 38 years old, she was, and it seemed unbearably hard. They buried her at Pleasant Ridge, wearing the coral pin Little Dave had brought her, and the two silver rings she always wore.

The burden of the housekeeping was now upon Adaline's slender 13-year-old shoulders. She was active and handy at all kinds of work but so small and slightly built that it seemed impossibly hard for her. Susie was only 6 and little Mike 3, almost like a baby to be cared for.

Cousin Betsy Ann Brock, Uncle Jim's daughter from Navilton, came and stayed for long periods of time. Eva Harlow worked for the family as a hired girl. Her face was badly scarred as a reminder of the time she and
